

TO OUR FRIENDS

Our first order of business this year was to update our mission statement to reflect our new path in this ever changing economy. “To lead the movement and nurture the belief that together we can improve the lives of Marylanders by ending hunger” has become our guiding light. As we face an unstable economy with many more hungry people seeking assistance, the Maryland Food Bank will keep our eye on the horizon of ending hunger in Maryland.

Our board of directors met and produced the single most important task to date—four outcomes towards which the Maryland Food Bank will strive over the next five years. This fine work resulted in a five-year plan that is achievable, measurable and inspirational. It is the driving force behind our organization. You can learn more about these four outcomes in this Annual Report in the section titled Fresh Baked Goals. Take a look—we are sure you will be pleased.

Internally, we perfected many of our systems while building a staff of professionals well equipped to take on the challenges of today. More than ever, the Maryland Food Bank is poised to be an effective and efficient operation.

Nationally, the Farm Bill with an expanded Nutrition Title was passed. This will mean many more pounds of commodity foods to the state.

This year, we also launched Pantry on the Go—a mobile food pantry program guaranteed to reach rural communities in need. We operated our first Summer Food Service Program, feeding 900 children lunch throughout the summer months. And we held an incredibly successful 2008 Blue Jean Ball that netted $257,000 for our organization—enough for 760,000 meals.

The Maryland Food Bank has seen traditional sources for donated product dwindling, which causes us to create new and unique ways to obtain more food and distribute it to our communities. We are turning to the farmers to help us utilize all of the 9 million pounds of excess produce left on the fields in Maryland. We are turning to the food industry and asking for their help in providing more nutritious perishable and frozen products. We are turning to the grocers to develop effective retail rescue programs that provide the Maryland Food Bank with meats, deli products, bakery, produce, and dairy products each week.

And, we are turning to our donors who tangibly keep our mission alive. We feel incredibly fortunate to have their support, and that of our many volunteers and our communities. For this we are most grateful.

GROWING OUR MISSION.

THE MISSION OF THE MARYLAND
FOOD BANK IS TO LEAD THE MOVEMENT AND NURTURE
THE BELIEF THAT TOGETHER
WE CAN IMPROVE THE LIVES OF MARYLANDERS BY ENDING HUNGER.

FIGHTING HUNGER AND FEEDING MARYLAND FOR NEARLY 30 YEARS.

The concept of food banking was developed in Phoenix, Arizona by John van Hengel in 1967. Van Hengel was working at a local soup kitchen when he spoke to a woman who regularly fed her children food from local grocery store dumpsters. He quickly realized that the food industry was throwing away perfectly good food that could be donated to the hungry in the community. Mr. van Hengel spent his life working tirelessly to connect the food industry to the hungry. He also founded the first food bank in the world—St. Mary's Food Bank Alliance in Arizona.

In 1979, this idea traveled to Baltimore City where the Maryland Food Bank was founded out of a warehouse on Fairlawn Avenue. As the first food bank on the East Coast, the Maryland Food Bank distributed 400,000 pounds of food to 38 network partners including soup kitchens, food pantries and emergency shelters. In FY2008 the Maryland Food Bank distributed over 14 million pounds of food to 1,000 network partners.

Growing from a grassroots organization that served Baltimore City to a more efficient and lean operation that serves the entire state has been a 29-year process. The Maryland Food Bank expanded to the Eastern Shore in 1980 and since then has utilized six Regional Distribution Organizations serve all of Maryland except Prince George's and Montgomery Counties. Today, Maryland Food Bank programs reach many local demographic groups including families with children, the elderly, the homeless, the homebound, low-income workers, the recently unemployed, and people with AIDS and other health problems.

HANDLE WITH CARE.

TOUCHING THOSE IN NEED.

The stereotype of who is hungry in America has long been outdated. In the public's mind, the typical food pantry client is often either homeless, chronically unemployed, mentally ill or a substance abuser. The reality though, is that the typical food pantry client is often just as hard-working as your neighbor or friend. In recent years, the working poor have come to rely more heavily on food assistance as they struggle to stretch their wages far enough to cover monthly bills. Now they're joined by an increasing number of previously middle-class families thrust into newly uncertain economic chaos, unprecedented layoffs and growing rates of unemployment. But the numbers only tell part of the story.

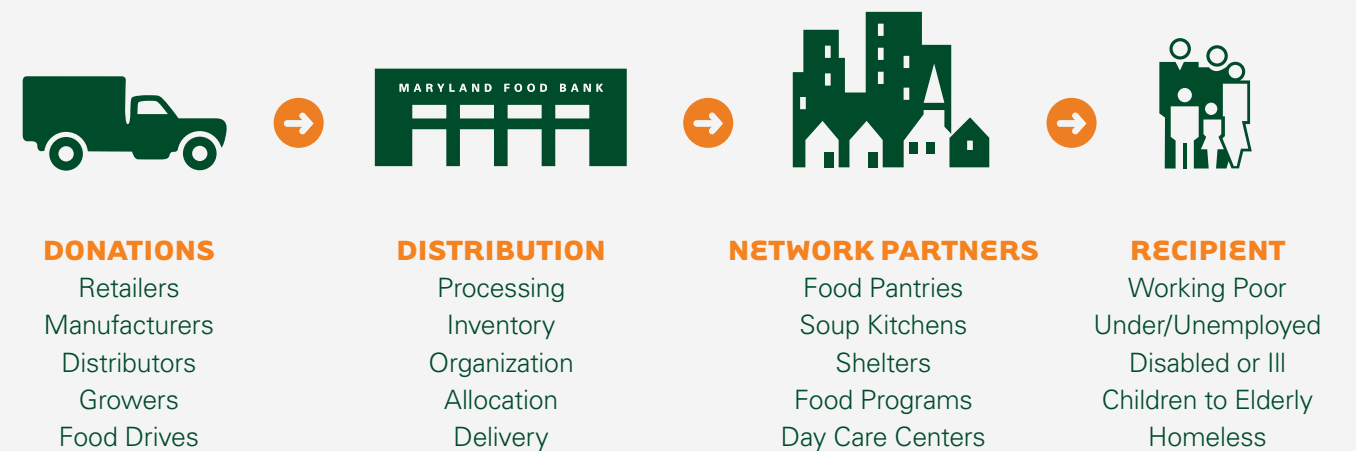

Behind the statistics are people accustomed to productive jobs who must confront the growing stress of not being able to provide something as basic as food for their families. Many face cruel choices: Pay the mortgage, or buy food? Take a sick child to the doctor, or go without groceries next week? These are choices that no family should have to face. The Maryland Food Bank is here to help. With more than 1,000 Network Partners across 21 counties and Baltimore City, the Maryland Food Bank spends 93 percent of its funds directly on hunger relief. With each donated dollar we can process up to 4 pounds of food. All of this is possible because of donations from corporations and individuals who care.

GETTING FOOD INTO THE RIGHT HANDS.

We utilize a wide range of resources to the best of our ability in order to service 22 of 24 counties in Maryland. The flow of food through our established network is illustrated below.

WE TURN LIVES AROUND.

Today, there are 516,000 Marylanders currently living at or below the federal poverty level. Of those, 370,000 live within our service area. The Maryland Food Bank collects millions of pounds of surplus food industry donations and purchased food through supporters, and distributes that product to our network partners across Maryland. What does that mean to you? Through our network and programs, your generous gifts reach many, many people in need every single day of the year.

Second Helping

The Maryland Food Bank works with Baltimore area restaurants, caterers, and institutions to gather prepared foods. Ready-to-eat meals are collected five days a week and distributed directly from our refrigerated truck to soup kitchens and food pantries at no cost.

Kids Cafe

The Maryland Food Bank provides snacks and meals to after-school programs that serve low-income children. These programs give children consistent access to healthy food in a safe, familiar setting.

Summer Food Service Program

This important initiative addresses child hunger during the summer months when children no longer receive school breakfasts and lunches.

BackPack Program

Children who are eligible for free or reduced school lunches are provided with backpacks filled with food on Fridays to take home and share with family over the weekend.

School Pantry

Parents of low-income students are engaged in volunteering at their children's schools and are offered access to school-operated food pantries.

Nutrition Education

The Maryland Food Bank partners with USDA and the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension to conduct nutrition education and food safety classes and demonstrations to help low-income families stretch their food dollars and improve their diets.

Produce Give-Away

The Maryland Food Bank distributes growing quantities of fresh produce donated from three sources:
1) Produce People Care at the Maryland Wholesale Produce Market in Jessup
2) Volunteers with the Mid-Atlantic Gleaning Network harvest crops from farmers' fields; and 3) Feeding America offers truckloads of produce from across the country.

Pantry on the Go

A mobile pantry program that provides more food to communities without straining the operations of already overburdened Maryland Food Bank agencies.

Community Kitchen - coming soon!

Donated food will be prepared, quick frozen and packaged for distribution to our network partners. The program will include training in proper food handling and preparation so participants can find jobs in the food service field.

FRESH BAKED GOALS.

With an increase in need of 25 to 50 percent at the end of FY2008 and an economic recession projected in 2009, it has become more important than ever for our organization to take a strategic approach to feeding the hungry. Listed below are the newly developed board directives that the Maryland Food Bank will incorporate to ensure that all Marylanders in need are well fed.

Outcome 1: Narrow the Hunger Gap

Food from traditional sources is dwindling. Manufacturer's overruns and production mistakes are decreasing. To get more food, the Maryland Food Bank must utilize:

- » more government food sources;
- » engage in retail rescue programs;
- » collaborate with farmers to glean leftover produce from the field; and
- » purchase food from the food industry through group buying with other food banks.

Outcome 2: Build a Stronger Network

In order to build a stronger network we must start with the basic building blocks. To do this the Maryland Food Bank must:

- » listen to our Network Partners' needs by conducting research;
- » facilitate inter-agency collaboration by conducting annual meetings; and
- » expand opportunities for our agencies to share best practices with each other.

Outcome 3: Create A Movement to End Hunger

Over the next five years, the food bank's focus will be to bring ending hunger to the front and center of the minds of all Marylanders. To do this the Maryland Food Bank must:

- » engage its network and general public in advocacy and public policy;
- » collaborate with other anti-hunger agencies; and
- » institute a branding and marketing campaign that effectively creates a movement to end hunger.

Outcome 4: Build a Sustainable Organization

The Maryland Food Bank's long-range plan delves into ways to improve financial health, attract and retain high-quality staff, ensure top-notch financial reporting and create ways to measure success. Some areas that will be explored are:

- » an endowment fund;
- » expansion of the annual fund program;
- » planned giving;
- » improvement of benefits and professional development support; and
- » the creation of a "culture of accountability."

THE MARYLAND FOOD BANK IS DISTRIBUTING UNPRECEDENTED AMOUNTS OF FOOD. IN FY08, OUR ORGANIZATION INCREASED DISTRIBUTION BY CLOSE TO 3.2 MILLION POUNDS.

THANKS FOR DOING YOUR PART.

“The Maryland Food Bank not only does good every day by feeding individuals and families in need; it is also at the forefront of strategic efforts to end hunger in this country. Indeed, the remarkable leadership and commitment of those who work and run the food bank make it possible to envision systems and processes where every child and every person has access to nutritious meals on a consistent basis. We should all be inspired by their efforts to eliminate waste and find ways to eradicate the very real problem of hunger in Maryland and America.”

- Congressman John Sarbanes
